FATHER OF THREE INSTANTLY KILLED IN A MOTOR CRASH

Earle J. Meyers, 25, of Siles, Meets Instant Death at Janney

FUNERAL ON SATURDAY

Believe He Fell Asleep While En Route Home From Work in Philadelphia

SILES, July 30.—Believed to have fallen asleep at the wheel of his automobile, Earle J. Meyers, 25, met instant death yesterday morning when he crashed into an abutment of an overhead bridge at Janney on the Lincoln Highway.

Meyers, father of three small girls, sustained head injuries, and his body was considerably mutilated. The car was greatly damaged, also.

Meyers was traveling alone at the time, he being en route home from his employment at the Philadelphia Division plant of the Bendix Corporation, where he was in inspector of airplane instruments. The crash occurred during daylight hours, and there were no marks where brakes had been quickly applied, hence investigating officers presumed the young man had fallen asleep.

His wife, Catherine H. Meyers (nee Gallagher); three little daughters, Roberta, Catherine and Marian; his parents, Harry and Anna Meyers; and two brothers, Harry and Elmer, all of Siles, survive.

Blast German, English Industrial Metropoles

By Leo V. Dolan (I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, July 30.—Industrial cities of both Germany and England were pounded from the air last night when the Royal Air Force heavily blasted Saarbrücken and the Nazi Luftwaffe again raided Birmingham, the British Air Ministry announced today.

The RAF attack on the Saar region of Western Germany, another in the promised series of day-to-day bombings designed to destroy Germany's ability to make war, was believed as formidable as the 600-plane assaults which laid waste vast areas of Hamburg, Sunday and Tuesday.

The Air Ministry said "a strong force" had blasted Saarbrücken, important center of iron and steel production in the heart of the coal region of Western Germany.

A statement by the authoritative British Press Association said it is believed that the results obtained by the RAF were "very good." There appeared to be little question that the damage was considerably heavier at Saarbrücken than the comparatively small Nazi Luftwaffe force inflicted on Birmingham, target of a German attack last Monday.

TWO SONS IN SERVICE

THE WAR AT A GLANCE

By International News Service
Although the Germans drove ahead on the Bataisk sector, directly south of Rostov, the Nazi offensive today appeared to have slowed down elsewhere as Marshal Semyon Timoshenko threw the first divisions of his huge reserves into the Don River battles.

Fighting was reported at Voronezh, Tsimlyansk, and in a new active front near Klotzskaya, 80 miles northwest of Stalingrad, where the enemy apparently was trying to drive a wedge north of the key industrial city.

But except around Bataisk German progress in the past 24 hours was of no importance. On the Kalach front, directly west of Stalingrad, where large Russian tank forces have been massed, the Nazis were reported to have been stopped dead in their tracks.

On the western European front the RAF carried out Britain's threat of daily bombings of Reich cities with a heavy raid on Saarbrücken, important manufacturing center on the Franco-German border. And as the first bombers returned to their bases, additional squadrons roared over the channel early today to launch the daily series of attacks on German camps and gun posts along the French coast.

"Jap" Thrust Toward Port Moresby Claimed Checked

By Lee Van Atta (I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

GEN. DOUGLAS MAC ARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA, July 30.—(INS)—The Japanese thrust by land toward Port Moresby was reported checked today after Allied patrols drove advancing enemy columns from the Kokoda Heights in Papua, New Guinea.

The enemy incursion was brought to a halt at a point approximately halfway between New Jap bases on the coast of Papua and Port Moresby, advanced United Nations base 160 miles distant.

While land forces sought to smash the Japs back along the jungle road across the Owen Stanley Range from Kokoda, some 60 miles from Moresby, United Nations fliers increased their efforts to wipe out the enemy coastal bases at Gona and Buna.

During one heavy air assault along the coast, Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced, Allied bombers damaged, and probably sank a Japanese destroyer.

U. S. "BUSHMASTERS," KIN TO COMMANDOS, HELP GUARD CANAL

By Richard Armstrong (I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

A PANAMANIAN JUNGLE, July 30.—(INS)—If one is to believe the "Bushmasters," those deadly soldiers of the United States Army who patrol the jungles of Panama and who take their name after the fearsome snake which infests those jungles, the "big green" of Panama is a friendly place.

It is friendly if it has been mastered, as it has by these colorful troops, many of whom are in barracks for the first time since August, 1940. Before that period they lived under canvas or in the jungle, often sleeping in their secret shelters where the nearest dry land was miles away.

Col. J. Prugh Herndon, of Tucson, Ariz., who is the proud "boss" of the main groups of these specialized troops, made it possible for the war correspondents accredited to the Caribbean Defense Command of Lieutenant General Frank M. Andrews, to follow them into the field.

At least Colonel Herndon called it the "field."

But by the time the party had left

Asks New Policies For Swift American Justice

By Jack Vincent (I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, July 30.—(INS)—Attorney General Francis Biddle fighting the move of seven of the eight German saboteurs to escape trial by a military commission, today asked the United States Supreme Court to establish broad new policies making American justice as swift and deadly as total war itself.

Appearing before the nation's highest tribunal at a special session of the Court called for the sole purpose of considering the spy case, Biddle said that old legal decisions of Civil War vintage should not be allowed to set the precedent for deciding the present controversy.

The Court started its extraordinary session at high noon yesterday but was forced to let the hearing go into the second day today when Biddle could not complete his arguments against defense moves to save the spies from the death penalty.

Attorneys for the defense are asking the high court to consider an appeal for writs of habeas corpus for seven of the spies, who claim that they are entitled to trial by civil courts instead of before the seven-general military commission appointed by President Roosevelt.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

Another "Purge"?

Washington, July 28. WHATEVER the outcome of the fight between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. James A. Farley for control of the New York State machine, one thing is certain—the President cannot come out of it with credit. Win or lose, he will have diminished his stature as a war President and detracted from our national unity in the greatest crisis of our history.

THAT is a tough thing to say, but it is true. Regardless of how they feel toward Mr. Roosevelt, thoughtful men everywhere will regret the light in which he is revealed and deplore the example he is setting his fellow-countrymen. It is the more shocking because the thing the President is now doing is exactly the thing which he has asked others not to do and which he has insisted he was not doing—to wit, concern themselves with partisan politics while the war is on.

IT IS IMPOSSIBLE to reconcile his present political activity with that single-hearted absorption in winning the war which the Administration spokesmen have been preaching to the rest of us and attributing to him. With vital problems of both foreign and domestic policy demanding his attention, the proper solution of which would tax to the utmost the powers of any President, Mr. Roosevelt should not be able to screen his purely political performances behind the war. It is not healthful to hide the facts from the people, nor is it fair to indict members of Congress for political activity and then ignore the extraordinary plunge into politics taken by the President.

IT IS QUITE clear that this New Continued On Page Four

Croydon Woman Makes 12th Donation; Two Small Boys Also Volunteer

EXCHANGE CLUB ALSO

Leading the group of donors of blood yesterday at the Harriman Hospital, when for the second time this week the Red Cross Mobile Blood Plasma Unit visited there, was a Croydon woman who made her 12th donation of blood.

She is Mrs. George Smith (nee Wicher), Croydon, a former Bristol resident. Mrs. Smith has on various occasions given transfusions, and also offered blood for the work of the Red Cross to save lives of men in Uncle Sam's service or of others injured in time of disaster.

A number of members of Bristol Exchange Club volunteered last evening, each giving a pint of blood.

The total number of volunteers yesterday was 102.

Two young boys, who cut grass on the Harriman Hospital lawn, seeing so many entering the hospital for the purpose of giving blood, decided that they too would volunteer. Forthwith Continued On Page Three

LATEST NEWS BULLETINS

"Not A Step Back," Stalin Tells Soviet Troops

Moscow—Josef Stalin sent an order of the day to Russian troops struggling against the Nazi hordes on the banks of the River Don today, urging them to stand firm against all attacks lest the Soviet fatherland be overrun. "Not a step back," his dramatic message read.

Printed in all Soviet newspapers and broadcast to the troops at the front the Premier's order said—

"Nothing is more dangerous than to think our armies can retreat further and further because our territory is big without a terrific strain—that one or another city need not be defended to the last drop of blood.

"The loss of every bit of territory is weakening our force and possibilities.

"Not a step back." Front-line dispatches make it obvious that the Red army's resistance throughout the whole southwestern battle area is stiffening.

The Soviet soldiers had little or no need of Stalin's message emphasizing the country's great peril. There were continued German advances and a new enemy crossing of the Don east of Rostov.

But every foot of the ground was paid for dearly and the Russians gave way fighting.

When one group of German tanks and infantry made a desperate charge and penetrated the Soviet lines to reach the Don, Russian aviation immediately bombed the enemy formations, scattering them and enabling Soviet tanks to attack.

India's Nationalist Party Demands "Fraught With Disastrous Consequences"

London—A warning that the Indian National Congress Party's demands for withdrawal of British control from India are "fraught with disastrous consequences" for the people of India and the cause of the United Nations was voiced in the House of Commons today.

The statement was made by Dominions Secretary L. S. Amery in response to questions.

"His Majesty's Government," he said, "reiterates its resolve to give fullest opportunity to the attainment of India's complete self-government.

"But it solemnly warns all those who stand behind the working committee of the Congress that the government of India will not flinch in its duty and will take every possible step to meet the situation."

Wedding To Take Place Today At Noon at White House

By George Durno (I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, July 30.—(INS)—Harry Hopkins, the angular right-hand man of President Roosevelt, takes a bride at high noon today in the White House which he has known as home for the last few years.

Mrs. Louise Gill Macy, New York socialite and fashion authority, arrived in Washington last evening to join her groom and assist Mrs. Roosevelt in supervising final arrangements for the ceremony.

It was probable the President would stand as best man for the one time social worker from Iowa and who started his government career as WPA director, then became Secretary of Commerce and now is recognized in every war capital of the world as an unquestioned spokesman for the White House.

Nicholas Lindington, a naval lieutenant, arrived on short leave to give his sister-in-law away and the Rev. Russell J. Clinchy, Congregationalist minister from Connecticut, was on hand to receive the wedding vows.

At direction of the First Lady, White House gardeners had thrown up a screen of greenery in the famed oval room study to serve as a backdrop for the ceremony and the White House cooks were busy preparing salmon-in-aspic and chicken for the ensuing wedding luncheon. Meyer Davis brought in his dance orchestra to render such tunes as "I Married An Angel," "Tangerine," and "Buckle Down Winsack," to say nothing of a specially written number, "Song of Happiness."

The four Hopkins children—16-year-old Diana and the three grown sons, David, Stephen and Robert—were present to see their father take his third wife. Also here were Mrs. Macy's two sisters, Mrs. Lindington and Gertrude Macy, secretary to Katharine Cornell.

In all there were only about 20 guests, most of them from the White House "family" of secretaries and aides.

Today's wedding was the first in the White House since August 7, 1918, when Miss Alice Wilson, niece of the First World War President, became the bride of the Rev. Isaac Stuart McElroy.

Although Mrs. Roosevelt had done everything else, she confessed that thus far she had been unable to decide upon a suitable wedding present for "Harry" and his bride.

Lieut. B. A. Passanante Asks For 100% Bond Buying

PHILADELPHIA, July 30.—(INS)—Lieut. B. A. Passanante, Philadelphia army flier who lost a leg on the opening day of the war when Jap planes bombed an airfield in Luzon, believes in nothing less than 100 per cent bond sales.

"You can boast of 98 percent buying bonds," he told a rally last night, "but remember, it's 100 per cent of the boys who go over the top... it's 100 percent of the boys who fight for you and who risk their lives daily."

American Motorship Listed As Destroyed

By International News Service

A small American motorship, torpedoed and sunk July 23rd with a probable loss of 18 lives, was listed today in the wartime toll of Allied Nations' ships destroyed by enemy action.

Among the missing were 17 members of the crew of 29 and one of the three passengers. Two torpedoes sent the ship to the bottom in less than a minute off a large West Indian island. The survivors aboard two rats reached an unidentified island where they were spotted by a patrol plane which guided a fishing boat to them.

One Man's Opinion By Walter Kierman (I. N. S. Staff Writer)

A Molotov cocktail is a bottle—any kind of a bottle—filled with gasoline—any kind of gasoline.

Thrown as a grenade it does as much damage as a chrome-plated, hand-polished, government-inspected shell.

If there is one thing we can learn from the Russians it's the kind of simplicity which turns an old bottle and a pint of gasoline into a respectable weapon.

No months were consumed on the drafting board on the Molotov cocktail, no million dollar fees were paid to commission agents to land a contract to make it, no pompous production figures were issued on it and there wasn't even a jurisdictional dispute over its manufacture.

Some guy in a fur hat just poured a little gas into a bottle, corked it up and tossed it at a German tank and the tank blew up.

Thought for the day: It was as simple as that.

RUBBER POLITICS

Few experiences since the beginning of the war have been more disgusting than the bickering about rubber. First Jesse Jones said there would be a great sufficiency of artificial rubber, then various official agencies pointed out the dire need for rubber, due to the loss of the East Indies, yet the President in an offhand statement at a press conference said that the situation was exaggerated.

Next came warnings that the fires of private-owned automobiles might have to be confiscated for the Army. To protests from Pennsylvania automobile drivers, now practically gasless by order of the OPA, that there was plenty of gasoline in this oil-producing and refining state, came the retort that if they were allowed to buy gas they might wear out their tires.

The petroleum industry undertook a rubber salvage campaign with a fine sense of public service and an obvious desire to keep the civilian business of the country geared to the motor vehicle as long as possible. The people, feeling that at last the President had a definite program, responded with fine enthusiasm. But their ardor was dampened by various reports that much of the rubber they were selling or contributing was of no value.

Now there is a controversy about whether the administration shall favor a synthetic rubber process which uses petroleum as the raw material, or another which uses alcohol, derived from farm products, as the raw material. The merits of both processes have been presented, but the decision seems to rest on the powers of various lobbies in Washington.

The country as a whole is not concerned about the method of supplying the deficiency, but it is deeply concerned about speed and efficiency, with cost as a secondary consideration. Certainly the country is not impressed by the statement of Vice-President Wallace that American production of synthetic rubber may "lead to world war No. 3." What the American people want is rubber to assure victory as soon as possible, with due regard for the fact that civilian economy depends on rubber. They look to Congress to satisfy their demand.

MEETING ON THE STREET

Husbands and wives have been known to argue about why it takes the ladies as long as it is alleged to take to do the household marketing. Women have a stock reply, saying it is because they give careful attention to their purchases, striving hard to stretch the shrinking family dollar.

The ladies might explain also that it is a social event for a woman to go down town to the stores. Before this presenting herself to the eyes of the world, the lady has to do considerable overhauling of her personal appearance. Not for her to venture to the street in the disarray in which she may appear when frying eggs.

It is a social event to meet friends with the market baskets. Much news is speeded into circulation by sidewalk conversations, nor does the interchange of thoughts cease while the clerk is wrapping up the bundles and getting the change.

It is a pleasant sight to see the ladies do their marketing with this social life as an incident. Men may save time by darting from one store to the next like a bumble-bee gathering honey from the flowers, but they devote so little time to any shopping deal that social life is out.

SYNOPSIS

As the prosecutor sums up the case against Elinor Carlisle for the murder of lovely, young Mary Gerrard, the accused's thoughts go back to events leading up to the fatal day. She had received an anonymous letter that someone was trying to do her and her fiancé, Roddy Welman, out of their Aunt Laura Welman's money. Elinor believed that "someone" was Mary Gerrard, Mrs. Welman's protegee and the daughter of the old lady's lodgekeeper. Elinor and Roddy decided to visit Aunt Laura and investigate the mysterious letter. In the meantime, Mrs. Welman's Nurse O'Brien related a strange incident to District Nurse Hopkins. The night before, her patient had asked for the old-fashioned picture of a handsome young man she kept in her dresser drawer. Gazing at it, the old lady murmured, "Lewis—Lewis!" Her late husband's name was Henry. Roddy and Elinor arrived at Hunterbury, the Welman estate. Pleased to learn of their engagement, Mrs. Welman asked Elinor if she really loved Roddy. "I care for Roddy enough but not too much," the girl answered, afraid to reveal she was madly in love with him. Soon he met Mary Gerrard and became smitten with her beauty. Elinor was broken-hearted. A week later, she and Roddy were summoned to their aunt's bedside by Dr. Peter Lord, who loves Elinor. Mrs. Welman had suffered a second stroke but managed to convey to her niece that she wanted Mary provided for in her will. The lawyer was to come next day. That night, Mrs. Welman died. Next morning, Nurse Hopkins discovered a tube of morphine missing from her bag, but believed she left it at home.

CHAPTER TEN

Nurse O'Brien said: "Hope you won't have too tiring a day, dear, after last night. Poor old lady. I didn't think she would last long."
"No, nor I. I dare say doctor will be surprised!"
Nurse O'Brien said with a tinge of disapproval: "He's always so hopeful about his cases."
Nurse Hopkins, as she prepared to depart, said: "Ah, he's young! He hasn't our experience."
On which gloomy pronouncement she departed.

Dr. Lord raised himself up on his toes. His sandy eyebrows climbed right up his forehead till they nearly got merged in his hair. He said in surprise: "So she died."
"Yes, Doctor."
On Nurse O'Brien's tongue exact details were tingling to be uttered, but with stern discipline she waited. Peter Lord said thoughtfully: "She's dead!" He stood for a moment thinking, then he said sharply: "Get me some boiling water."
Nurse O'Brien was surprised and mystified, but true to the spirit of hospital training, hers not to reason why. If a doctor had told her to go and get the skin of an alligator she would have murmured automatically, "Yes, Doctor," and glided obediently from the room to tackle the problem.

Roderick Welman said: "Do you mean to say that my aunt died intestate—that she never made a will at all?"
Mr. Seddon polished his eyeglasses. He said: "That seems to be the case."
Roddy said: "But how extraordinary!"
Mr. Seddon gave a deprecating cough. "Not so extraordinary as you might imagine. It happens oftener than you would think. There's a kind of superstition about it. People will think they've got plenty of time. The mere fact of making a will seems to bring the possibility of death nearer to them. Very odd—but there it is!"
Roddy said: "Didn't you ever—"

er—expostulate with her on the subject?"

Mr. Seddon replied dryly: "Frequently."

"And what did she say?"
Mr. Seddon sighed. "The usual things. That there was plenty of time! That she didn't intend to die just yet! That she hadn't made up her mind definitely, exactly how she wished to dispose of her money!"

Elinor said: "But surely, after her first stroke—?"

Mr. Seddon shook his head. "Oh, no, it was worse than that. She wouldn't hear the subject mentioned!"
Roddy said: "Surely that's very odd?"

Mr. Seddon said again: "Oh, no. Naturally, her illness made her much more nervous."

Elinor said in a puzzled voice: "But she wanted to die..."

Polishing his eyeglasses, Mr. Seddon said: "Ah, my dear Miss Elinor, the human mind is a very curious piece of mechanism. Mrs. Welman may have thought she wanted to die; but side by side with that feeling there ran the hope that she would recover absolutely. And because of that hope, I think she felt that to make a will would be unlucky. It isn't so much that she didn't mean to make one, as that she was eternally putting it off."

"You know," went on Mr. Seddon, suddenly addressing Roddy in an almost personal manner, "how one puts off and avoids a thing that is distasteful—that you don't want to face?"

Roddy flushed. He muttered: "Yes, I—I—yes, of course. I know what you mean."

"Exactly," said Mr. Seddon. "Mrs. Welman always meant to make a will, but tomorrow was always a better day to make it than today! She kept telling herself that there was plenty of time."

Elinor said slowly: "So that's why she was so upset last night—and in such a panic that you should be sent for..."

Mr. Seddon replied: "Undoubtedly!"

Roddy said in a bewildered voice: "But what happens now?"

"To Mrs. Welman's estate?" The lawyer coughed. "Since Mrs. Welman died intestate, all her property goes to her next of kin—that is, to Miss Elinor Carlisle."

Elinor said slowly: "All to me?"

"The Crown takes a certain percentage," Mr. Seddon explained. He went into details. He ended: "There are no settlements or trusts. Mrs. Welman's money was hers absolutely to do with as she chose. It passes, therefore, straight to Miss Carlisle. Er—the death duties, I am afraid, will be somewhat heavy, but even after their payment the fortune will still be a considerable one, and it is very well invested in sound gilt-edged securities."

Elinor said: "But Roderick—"

Mr. Seddon said with a little apologetic cough: "Mr. Welman is only Mrs. Welman's husband's nephew. There is no blood relationship."

"Quite," said Roddy.

Elinor said slowly: "Of course, it doesn't much matter which of us gets it, as we're going to be married." But she did not look at Roddy.

It was Mr. Seddon's turn to say, "Quite!" He said it rather quickly.

"But it doesn't matter, does it?" Elinor said. She spoke almost bravely. Mr. Seddon had departed. Roddy's face twitched nervously.

He said: "You ought to have it. It's quite right you should. For heaven's sake, Elinor, don't get it into your head that I grudge it to you. I don't want the money!"

Elinor said, her voice slightly unsteady: "We did agree, Roddy, in London that it wouldn't matter which of us it was, as—as we were going to be married..."

He did not answer. She persisted: "Don't you remember saying that, Roddy?"

He said: "Yes."

He looked down at his feet. His face was white and sullen, there was pain in the taut lines of his sensitive mouth.

Elinor said with a sudden gallant lift of the head: "It doesn't matter—if we're going to be married... But are we, Roddy?"

He said: "Are we what?"
"Are we going to marry each other?"

"I understood that was the idea." His tone was indifferent, with a slight edge to it. He went on: "Of course, Elinor, if you've other ideas now..."

Elinor cried out: "Oh, Roddy, can't you be honest?"

He winced. Then he said in a low, bewildered voice: "I don't know what's happened to me..."

Elinor said in a stifled voice: "I do..."

He said quickly: "Perhaps it's true, that I don't, after all, quite like the idea of living on my wife's money..."

Elinor, her face white, said: "It's not that... It's something else..." She paused, then she said, "It's—Mary, isn't it?"

Roddy muttered unhappily: "I suppose so. How did you know?"

Elinor said, her mouth twisting sideways in a crooked smile: "It wasn't difficult... Every time you look at her—it's there in your face for any one to read..."

Suddenly his composure broke. "Oh, Elinor—I don't know what's the matter! I think I'm going mad! It happened when I saw her—that first day—in the wood... Just her face—it's turned everything upside down. You can't understand that..."

Elinor said: "Yes, I can. Go on."

Roddy said helplessly: "I didn't want to fall in love with her... I was quite happy with you. Oh, Elinor, what a cad I am, talking like this to you..."

Elinor said: "Nonsense. Go on. Tell me..."

He said brokenly: "You're wonderful... Talking to you helps frightfully. I'm so terribly fond of you, Elinor! You must believe that. This other thing is like an enchantment! It's upset everything: my conception of life—and all the decent ordered reasonable things..."

Elinor said gently: "Love—isn't very reasonable..."

Roddy said

Mr. DeVoe said:

Volunteer workers will help the various units.

spread but weak raids on England, fanning out to bomb towns in the midlands and West Midlands, northwest England, East Anglia and the outlying districts of London itself. Five German raiders were shot down.

Savage fighting was indicated in New Guinea where a Japanese land force pushed along the mountain road to Port Moresby.

Allied troops met the advanced enemy columns head-on and drove them back from the heights of Kokoda, midway between Port Moresby and the newly established Japanese base on the northeastern tip of New Guinea.

The American-Australian forces suffered some casualties, including Lieut. Col. W. T. Owen who was mortally wounded. Gen. Douglas MacArthur awarded him the distinguished service cross, and he is the first Australian to receive an American decoration in this war.

Allied bombers shuttled back and forth from Port Moresby to the enemy base in the Buna-Gona area in a determined effort to bomb the enemy to destruction. The Japanese made light and ineffective raids on Port Moresby and Port Darwin.

The fall in the Egyptian desert campaign continued with only light patrol action and bombing and strafing raids reported. One RAF squadron blasted an Axis transport concentration on the southern end of the battle line and knocked out 40 trucks.

The American Air Force in China scored another victory over the Japanese during an enemy raid on Hengyang in Hunan Province, shooting down three of nine bombers that attacked the Chinese base.

The Russian campaign took on a slightly brighter aspect as the Russian reserves made themselves felt. Marshal Timoshenko has been carefully hoarding his strength while the enemy has expended men and materials with great prodigality.

The official communist party newspaper Pravda today called on the Red Army to stand firm with "not a step backward" and declared that the Germans are now throwing in their last reserves.

Although appreciating the offer, Mrs. Megargee told the boys to grow big and strong so they might aid in the future.

The mobile unit of the Red Cross is at the plant of Paterson Parchment Paper Company today, where employees are volunteering in this humanitarian work.

Colonel explained as he saw our puzzled expressions. "He says its chilly." The Colonel speaks several tribal languages.

Still wet from their river crossing—they never seem to catch cold from letting their jungle uniforms dry on them—Sgt. Gordon Hawkins, of Douglas, Ariz., and Corp. Wright of Cottonwood, Ariz., gave a jui jitsu demonstration on a jungle trail.

Corporal Wright crouched along the trail. Sergeant Hawkins jumped from ambush and circled his neck from behind. Wright threw Hawkins over his head and the sergeant landed squarely on his head, denting his fiber helmet. Wright landed on his back getting a hammer lock which, with slight pressure, would have broken his opponent's arm.

We were worried for fear Hawkins had been hurt. But he got up grinning and said, "Getting tough, eh? Next time I'll throw you."

They showed us how to make their deadly "booby traps" which can wipe out entire squads of enemy.

They camouflaged their sleeves and arms with jungle greenery and staged a practice ambush on a squad designated as enemy which was terrifying to watch in the eerie green light of the jungle, even though we knew it was a practice movement.

And then we settled down in a machete-cleared circle for a lunch of iron rations, washed down with purified jungle creek water.

Discipline is strict and morale and enthusiasm is high. As a result there is an easy relationship between officers and men in the Bushmasters which enabled them to sit down together and share their peanuts, dried milk, dried peaches and other concentrated food.

"Have some steak," laughed Sgt. Tony Davila, of Tucson, Ariz., as he handed me a dried peach.

Oath was also given to a few others who had not previously been sworn into service of other organizations for defense work.

Penn Medical Training Corps, consisting of 21 members, all graduates of an advanced first-aid training and several advanced graduate Red Cross instructors, is one of the best equipped and drilled first aid groups in the county.

BLACKOUT ODDITIES

By Leonard Roberts (I. N. S. Staff Writer)

This being the season for blackouts, not only in the United States but the world over, pity the poor Knoxville,

Pa., clerk who had to explain this one: A woman entered a drug store and asked for "blackout paper." When told it was sold by the foot, she blushing remarked: "Oh, I thought it was a paper you could read during a blackout."

Then there was the post warden at Easton, Pa., who asked a man, during the blackout, to get off the street. Whereupon the answer was, "Get off the street yourself, buddy, I'm a warden, too."

In Philadelphia, one blackout enthusiast was held under $500 bond when he persisted in operating a hand organ, causing consternation among air-raid wardens in the area.

Out in Los Angeles, it wasn't a blackout that was queer. Just six mules who had to rejoin their Japanese owners at Manzanar Reception center because they had been taught directions only in Japanese.

And at Astoria, Ore., scene of the recent Jap shelling of the Pacific coast, two teen-aged lads were so impressed by the Nipponese efforts that one boy said to the other: "Some fireworks, huh?"

News Queeriosities

By Leonard Roberts (I. N. S. Staff Writer)

People have more fun than anybody. It is said, and from coast to coast they proved it during the past week.

Mrs. Jenetta B. Lux, an 81-year-old widow, is determined to have one more fling at romance so she eloped with 69-year-old George P. Lux of Los Angeles. "My children didn't want me to get married," she said, "but I was too lonely without a companion."

James Mitchell, 65, of Detroit, after a four week drinking spree, decided that 29 days would "straighten me out." Draping himself over a fire alarm box, he sent out a call for aid. The judge, however, didn't think it was funny and gave Mitchell 10 days more than he expected.

Facing death in a California lethal gas chamber for the murder of his parents, Conquy Rogers, 24, still found time to jokingly inquire of his guards whether his "last request" could be for a gas mask. Rogers, however, doesn't think it will be granted.

From Washington, the male citizenry of the nation received a severe jolt. The OPA announced that hat manufacturers are finding new materials difficult to obtain and it looks like the men will have to stare at the combination bird baskets and fruit displays another season.

Charles Taylor, 55, of Rock Island, Ill., failed to commit suicide after a very determined attempt. He climbed 18 feet in a tree, placed the muzzle of the rifle against his chest and pulled the trigger. But the shot tumbled him into a tangle of branches where he was rescued by police.

Who says this war is reaching every part of the world? J. H. McHugh, 56-year-old Pueblo, Colo., prospector, arrested for questioning about his military status, told police he had been in the Colorado Rockies prospecting and didn't even know we were in the war.

The Great Game of Politics

York fight is of his own making and that he is in it up to his neck. If it were not for him, there would be no fight at all. Mr. Farley distinctly did not seek the fight—quite the reverse. The truth is that the President went far out of his way to make this a fight in which now is involved not only the Governorship but the State delegates to the next national convention. That is the basic fact; but there are others. There is, for example, the fact that the President, after a conference of his own seeking, some six weeks ago, let Mr. Farley leave the White House under the impression that he had no objection to Attorney General Bennett as the candidate.

THERE IS the further fact that almost immediately the anti-Bennett movement, with White House backing, began, and that the candidate whom Mr. Roosevelt has put in the fight—Senator Mead—is a second-grade New Deal rubber-stamp statesman who is aware of his own unfitness to be Governor and is being compelled to run against his own wishes. A final fact is that should the President succeed in defeating Mr. Bennett it easily might put Mr. Farley, to whom Mr. Roosevelt owes more politically than anyone else, out of business. In brief, what is now being tried is another White House "purge" in order that in 1944 there shall be no one in New York who can stand in the way of another "draft" movement for the President or interfere with his choice for his successor.

THE SIMILARITY to the attempted "purge" of 1938 and the present attempt is significantly attested by the almost identical words with which the White House makes its position clear. In 1938 the first man marked for the "purge" was Senator Gillette, of Iowa, against whom the New Dealers had entered Representative Wearin. Mr. Harry Hopkins, speaking for the President, made this statement: "If I were a voter in Iowa, I would vote for Otha Wearin." Last Wednesday the President permitted Senator Mead to quote him from the White House doormats as follows: "If I were a delegate to the convention, I would cast my vote for Jim Mead." Mr. Farley's friends have not failed to note this similarity of statement, nor have they failed to recall that Senator Gillette was renominated and re-elected.

NOW, IN MUCH the same way, the White House is trying to "liquidate" Mr. Farley. Under the circumstances, it is not surprising that in the country as a whole he should be receiving a large sympathetic support. In the first place, there is a general feeling that he is an able, honorable man who is being unfairly dealt with. In the second place, there is widespread resentment over the clarity with which it is demonstrated that the President has the time and the energy now to push his personal political plans for the next convention.

IT IS a formidable combination Mr. Farley is fighting and he deserves credit for his independence. It must give him courage and confidence to recall that in the 1938 purge Mr. Roosevelt's candidates were rejected in eight States, nominated in none. Even in peacetime, there is always resentment over the efforts of a President to dominate the local politics of any State. It is reasonable to believe that the reaction will be greater when the attempt is made in the midst of a great war which, at the moment, is not going so well for our side.

Defenders Like These Papers, Army Men Say

Nothing makes a selective service man in camp happier than a letter from home or a home-town newspaper in the daily mail, army officials said recently after an extensive survey.

Next in order, the selective service youth likes sweets such as candy, cookies and chocolates—and chewing gum!

Officers say that on the march the gum helps keep the boys from drinking too much water and from dipping into their lunch ration.

Other offerings which bring a smile of pleasure to the enrollee include a general repertoire of utilities among which are books of stamps, flashlights, a towel now and then, toilet articles, and reading materials.

Officers say that if relatives want to be sure their addressee gets what's mailed to him, they should address the letter or package in this way: Name first, his company or battery second, his regiment third, and, lastly the name of the post office.

AMATEUR BOXING DISCONTINUED FOR THE DURATION OF THE WAR BY ST. ANN'S CLUB, IT IS ANNOUNCED

Amateur boxing for this area has been discontinued for the duration of the war. The above announcement was made by Carl Castor, match-maker for the St. Ann's club, which had intended to conduct amateur bouts on Tuesday nights.

At an A. A. U. meeting, Castor presented eight Bristol boys on one side of a boxing card. He wanted them matched with any boxer in the A. A. U. but the boxers were not to be had.

It was learned afterwards that many of the amateur boxing clubs of Philadelphia and area were forced to disband because most of the boys were either drafted or enlisted in the service. It was explained that there has been no amateur boxing in Philadelphia since last February.

All amateur boxing has been confined to New Jersey, Chester, and Wilmington and when asked for these boys, Castor was told that the transportation problem would be a hindrance and that the price the amateurs would ask to come to Bristol would be too high.

Because of the shortage of fighters in the amateur ranks, some of the boys are fighting one another three times in a week and some opponents weight difference runs as high as 16 to 15 pounds per fighter.

Rather than book a show that would displease the Bristol fans, the Bristol representatives decided to cancel the show which was supposed to be booked for next Tuesday night and not run for the duration.

RAIN CAUSES GAMES TO BE POSTPONED HERE

Rain caused the postponement of both games of the Bristol Suburban League scheduled for last night. Two games are booked for tonight. On the Edgely diamond, Edgely will be host to the Diamond team and on St. Ann's field, St. Ann's meets Hunter's.

The Diamond-Edgely game was originally scheduled to be played on St. Ann's field last night but has been switched to the Edgely diamond. It is most likely that the league's leading hurler, Turner Ashby, will pitch for the Edgelyites while Sullivan will do the hurling for the Diamond team.

Jim Hopkins will most likely toss them in for St. Ann's while Eddie Lada or Tony Rotundo will hurl for Hunter's. Rotundo has beaten St. Ann's twice this season.

Both games are scheduled to begin at 6:30 o'clock.

COAST FISHERMEN ARE TOLD OF RESTRICTIONS

Coast Guard Orders Are Given For Operators of Fishing Boats

IGNORANCE NO EXCUSE

Fishermen from this area who make trips to the Atlantic coast for their favorite sport are advised of the restrictions and supplementary regulations on operations of boats along the coast of the Fourth Naval District.

A warning is issued by the U. S. Coast Guard, office of E. A. Coffin, captain of the port, Atlantic City, N. J., as follows:

All Boat Owners and Operators—Take Warning!

Any infraction of the following requirements is inimical to the interests of the United States, and will result in the revocation of the license to operate of an offending boat for an indefinite period.

"Party" Fishing Boats—Passengers. On and after August 1, 1942, no persons will be taken as passengers on any "Party Boat" unless they have in their possession, at all times while on the boat, Coast Guard Identification Cards issued to them personally. These cards will be kept ready for inspection by the Coast Guard boarding boat.

No enemy alien will be permitted on board any boat in the 4th Naval District at any time, in any capacity.

TWO HANDS ARE BETTER THAN ONE

PANCHO SEGURA, OF ECUADOR, NEW STAR ON THE TENNIS HORIZON - HE RECENTLY WON THE EASTERN CLAYCOURT CHAMPIONSHIP

SEGURA, A TWO-HANDED DRIVER, HOPES TO BRING OUR NATIONAL TITLE BACK TO HIS NATIVE COUNTRY

No passenger on any "party boat" will be permitted to carry on board such boat any camera, firearm or radio set.

Owners and/or operators of "party boats" shall keep a complete hook record with dates, names, addresses and identification card numbers of all passengers taken on board during each and every trip. This record book must be kept on board the boat, accessible for inspection at any time by the Coast Guard.

"Party" Fishing Boats—Operation. "Party boats" are restricted in operation to the inland waters of the 4th Naval District and to a distance offshore not to exceed ONE MILE.

All operation will be between sunrise and sunset. This means that a boat will not leave its dock before sunrise and will be back at its dock before sunset.

Owners and/or operators holding licenses for the operation of a "party" fishing boat shall not use such license to operate the boat as a commercial fishing vessel.

Owners and/or operators of "party boats" are hereby again cautioned that they will not be permitted to use these boats as private pleasure craft, for the purpose of the owner and crew, or a friend or two, to go out fishing. The license to operate a "party boat" is issued for the sole purpose of permitting the owner or operator to earn his livelihood with that boat.

If it appears that any such license was obtained upon fraudulent representations made to the Captain of the Port, the license will be revoked and the boat impounded for the duration of hostilities.

Convoys—All Boats to Keep Clear. Owners and/or operators of all boats—whether commercial fishing vessels, "party boats" or boats on authorized patrol—are warned to comply strictly with the following:

A. Give all Coastal Convoys a "wide berth." This means keep clear of the flank escort vessels by not less than one-half mile.

B. Any fishing vessel—or any other boat—seeing a convoy approaching shall immediately get underway on a course 90 degrees from the course of the convoy. It shall be strictly up to the boat operator to keep watch for convoys, so as to get clear by at least one-half mile from the flank escort vessels.

C. No fishing vessel—or any other boat—shall attempt under any circumstances to pass ahead of, or astern of, or to cut through any convoy, or to pass between any escort vessel and a convoy vessel.

D. If an escort plane "dives" and "zooms" on any fishing vessel or any other boat, that is a signal for the operator of that vessel or boat to get underway.
